MEMORIAL AND MONUMENTAL INSCRIPTIONS AT ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH AND CHURCHYARD, Church of England Parish of Loweswater, Cumbria

Introduction

Credits. These inscriptions were first compiled in 1972 by Rosemary Southey and continued in 1994-95 by Heather Thompson and Ellen Bentsen. The accompanying plan was drawn by Heather Thompson in 1995. Published on behalf of the Lorton & Derwent Fells Local History Society, www.derwentfells.com. Copyright is vested in the Society, and this document is provided for personal use only. A history of the Church can be found in the booklet marking the centenary of its rebuilding at <http://derwentfells.com/pdfs/sources/LoweswaterChurchRowland1929.pdf>

A note on dates. Before 1753, in England, the calendar year started on 25 March, Lady Day, meaning that January, February and most of March were at the end of the year. The adoption of the Gregorian calendar, replacing the old Julian calendar, resulted in the start of 1753 being advanced to 1 January instead of 25 March, as well as 11 dates being 'lost' from 1752. Inscriptions on grave markers made before 1753 will generally be 'old style', which is as they knew it at the time, rather than 'new style' which gives the later year number for historical dates in the early part of the years before the change.

The inscriptions

Notes: Surnames are shown in bold-face type; parentheses enclose words, letters, or numbers that are probable but illegible; blank spaces indicate words, letters, or numbers that are illegible; slashes indicate ends of lines on stones. Stones with inscriptions on both sides are shown on the map as single stones; abbreviations, punctuation and spelling appear in this document as they are written on the stones. The earliest readable date on a tombstone is 1685. (See #22, below.)

Index I lists house names and place names that appear on the stones, followed by their location number in the text and on the churchyard map. Note: most stones do not include this information.

Index II lists the surnames that appear on the stones followed by their location number in the text and on the churchyard map.
